Tech discipline meeting 26/27

A monthly rhythm to standardise how we work, agree our tools, and build the two product teams into one discipline.

Draft for discussion. Everything here can change.

What we want, and how we get there

Standardise by agreeing

Every session ends with a small decision or a one-month trial, captured in a shared Engineering Playbook.

Two teams, two hosts

Each session is run by a pair, one from each product team. Collaboration is built into the format.

Start with what exists

Early sessions map how each team works today, so standards come from real practice.

Year plan, part one: understand, then agree

- Oct to Dec 2026: Foundations
  - Oct: Kick-off and how we work today (stacks, tools, repos, deployment)
  - Nov: Git workflow and code review
  - Dec: Tooling, environments and a tools audit (light show-and-tell)

- Jan to Mar 2027: Standards
  - Jan: Code quality: linting, formatting, testing
  - Feb: Documentation and decision records
  - Mar: AI-assisted development: tools, safe use, client data and IP

Year plan, part two: work as one discipline

- Apr to Jun 2027: Collaboration
  - Apr: Cross-team pairing and rotation trial
  - May: Shared components, libraries and starter templates
  - Jun: Security and accessibility baselines

- Jul to Sep 2027: Maturity
  - Jul: Performance and observability
  - Aug: Blameless post-mortem practice (or a flexible or social slot)
  - Sep: Year in review, career development and skills

Making it stick

Rotating hosts

Names against each month, always one from each team.

A living playbook

Use Joey’s amazing Docs Hub to store each meeting summary.

One flexible slot

Room for a team request or a session that overran.

Quarterly check

What was adopted, what wasn't, and why.

For us to decide today

- Which topics matter most, and what is missing?
- What is the biggest inconsistency between the two teams right now?
- Who wants to host which month?
- Any other questions?
